

LLOYD CENTER FOR THE ENVIRONMENT

Protecting nature through research and education

Annual Report 2009

PURPOSE

The Lloyd Center for the Environment was founded for the purpose of conducting research and providing education program services designed to promote a scientific and public understanding of coastal, estuarine and watershed environments, largely in, but not restricted to, the coastal environments of southeastern New England, and to acquire, develop and operate educational training and research facilities for the study and protection of the natural environment, marine life and coastal ecological systems of said region.

Annual Report 2009

A Message from the Board Chair and Executive Director:

We are pleased to report on a most remarkable year at the Lloyd Center.

Thanks to the generosity of our members and supporters, and the hard work of our staff and volunteers, the Lloyd Center showed remarkable resilience in the face of a continuing difficult economic climate.

Our talented teaching staff helped more than 15,000 students to understand the far-reaching impact of human behavior on the natural world in which we live. These future stewards of our environment leave the Center, or its in-school classes, engaged and energized about the need to take care of even the tiniest parts of nature.

Complementing the educational component of our mission, members of our research staff continued to play a leading role in promoting the preservation of biodiversity in this part of New England, and in more distant reaches. Their work on endangered species, water quality, and ecology further bolstered the relevance of the programs we offer to schools and the public.

At mid-year, we bid farewell to our Director of Education, Tricia Sheppard, as she left with her family for new challenges in Maryland, and we welcomed former Lloyd Center educator-naturalist Rachel Stronach back on board to lead this critically important part of our work.

December brought the sad news of our founder Karen Lloyd's death. We remember her kindness, her intense interest in nature and her determination to make a difference in the ongoing battle to preserve the fragile ecology of our coast.

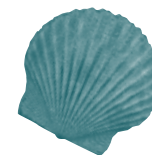

We salute Karen Lloyd and congratulate all those who have helped to make her vision such a vibrant reality.

LLOYD CENTER FOR THE ENVIRONMENT Protecting nature through research and education

The past three decades have seen the Lloyd Center for the Environment grow from a small environmental “studies” organization to a dynamic membership-supported institution, whose research and education services are increasingly sought by educators, government agencies and citizens throughout New England.

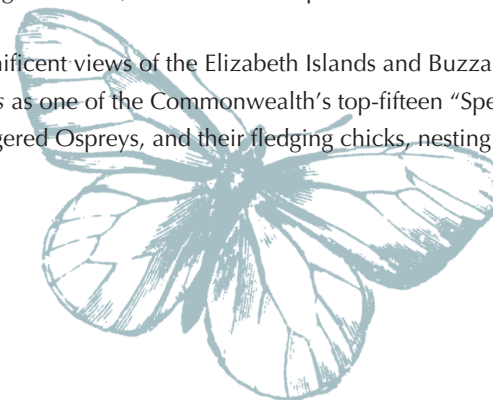

Founded in 1978 and situated with its headquarters and spectacular nature preserve overlooking the scenic Slocum River estuary in southeastern Massachusetts, the Lloyd Center has achieved a well earned reputation for excellence in environmental research and education. Through its innovative outreach programs, it has established itself as a highly regarded leader in the ongoing effort to raise awareness of the area’s fragile coastal resources and the importance of protecting them.

At its 55-acre nature preserve, comprising pristine salt marsh, maritime forest and undisturbed wetlands, in one of the most unspoiled reaches of Dartmouth, the Visitor Center is open from 10 to 4, Tuesday through Saturday (plus Sundays, in the summer), free of charge. Here, aquarium exhibits offer close-up views of live freshwater and saltwater species of fish and other marine critters. The Visitor Center is also home to a fascinating collection of live local reptiles, many representing endangered species, being “head-started” and readied for release back into their natural environment. At the always popular touch-tank, youngsters learn the hands-on joy of socializing with gentle spider crabs, elusive minnows, sea stars, whelks, hermit crabs, periwinkles and mussels.

The current “Raptor-in-Residence” is a majestic red-shouldered hawk, discovered permanently disabled in nearby woods, rescued by Lloyd Center naturalists and nursed back to health. Although not here as an “exhibit”, this magnificent bird of prey, having been painstakingly “socialized” by members of our teaching staff, is now being introduced to thousands of wide-eyed children, both in their classrooms and here at our nature preserve. To these eager learners, it has come to represent one of the true wonders of nature.

The top-floor Osprey Room Observatory, with its magnificent views of the Elizabeth Islands and Buzzards Bay, has been designated by the Massachusetts Executive Office of Environmental Affairs as one of the Commonwealth’s top-fifteen “Special Places”. Through telescopes there, one can get a bird’s-eye view of formerly endangered Ospreys, and their fledging chicks, nesting on platforms erected by members of the Center’s research staff.

Trails are open from dawn to dusk, seven days a week.

ENVIRONMENTAL EDUCATION

The Lloyd Center continues to provide an increasing number of unique hands-on science programs for schoolchildren and adolescents in over thirty different New England cities and towns, at levels ranging from kindergarten through college. In 2009, the Center's Education staff, under the leadership of Rachel Stronach and Patricia Sheppard, worked with over fifty public elementary and middle schools in the region, visiting the students on a regular basis to teach interactive lessons on relevant and critically important environmental issues.

Two of the curriculum-based offerings, Feathery FocusSM (an ornithology program specially created for the third-grade level) and Turn-the-Tide (a program dealing with the ecosystems of local estuaries, taught on the fifth-grade level), have proven to be especially effective. All education programs are designed to meet the Massachusetts Curriculum Frameworks in Science and Technology/Engineering and in History/Social Studies.

For children ages 5-15, the Center's Education Department annually provides over a dozen distinct summer programs designed to help students develop a better understanding of science and a deeper appreciation for the need to protect the fragile nature of our coast. Every year, as many as 15,000 students benefit from their participation in Lloyd Center education programs.

ENVIRONMENTAL RESEARCH

Since its founding, the Lloyd Center has focused its research activities on assessing and documenting the distribution and ecology of the natural resources of southeastern New England. In 2009, our research staff, under the leadership of Mark Mello, conducted pre- and post-restoration monitoring of three local salt marshes. Collaborating with Tufts University, they supervised eight volunteers who spent over 200 hours documenting instances of seabird mortality and live-bird activity on the shorelines of Buzzards Bay. Lloyd Center scientists conducted rare-species habitat assessments on Nantucket, Martha's Vineyard, and in a number of other nearby localities.

Focusing on officially-endangered species, members of our research staff compiled comprehensive inventories of Lepidoptera (an order of insects comprising butterflies and moths) for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts (under its Natural Heritage & Endangered Species Program) and completed a number of studies for The Trustees of Reservations and several Martha's Vineyard conservation agencies, including a major study to determine the future of a privately owned 280-acre property.

In addition to its continuing work in protecting endangered least terns and diamondback terrapins on a number of state-controlled beaches, 2009 saw the Center complete its 23rd year of monitoring and protecting the federally-listed piping plover.

ENVIRONMENTAL OUTREACH

The Lloyd Center offers a wide variety of programs designed to engage the minds of southeastern New England citizens of all ages, expanding their understanding of the fragile nature of our coastal environment and the importance of working together to protect it.

In 2009, popular programs included canoe and kayak trips, nature walks, shorebird-watches, seal-watches, whale-watches, midnight "owl-prowls", butterfly and moth identification workshops, as well as an annual fall rowing and paddling regatta which raises awareness of the threats facing the delicate ecosystems of local estuaries.

Five miles of rustic hiking trails, open to the public on the Hardscrabble Nature Preserve, here on Potomska Road, and a broad variety of live marine animal exhibits, complemented by programs and seminars, continued to draw a growing number of visitors to the Center. In addition, outreach collaboration with partnering organizations has proven exceptionally effective in promoting lifestyle changes aimed at a more sustainable use of natural resources.

The Center's unique website provides a vast amount of environmental research and education information for those who seek it electronically.

Special thanks to the “Barney’s Joy family” for their continued generosity in allowing countless thousands of children to have their first experience with the true wonders of “where the land meets the sea”, through a Lloyd Center program which took them to that special part of the world.

THE ART DRIVE

This annual open studio weekend event—sponsored by Dartmouth and Westport artists—highlights educating visitors one-on-one, in real-life studio environments with demonstrations of diverse and unique talents. Each artist donated a percentage of their profits to the Lloyd Center. As the artists put it, "... a way to support an organization dedicated to educating people about their natural local environment, which is an inspiration to many of the artists who work and live in the area."

This marks the first Lloyd Center Annual Report since the death of our founder, Karen Gallup ("K.G.") Lloyd.

Born in London, "K. G." was the daughter of Demarest Lloyd and Katharine Nordell Lloyd and the last grandchild of Chicago social reformer, Henry Demarest Lloyd. In 1978, her gift of home and land established the Lloyd Center here in memory of her mother, a summer resident of nearby Potomska Point and life-time conservationist and lover of nature.

Over the last three decades, the institution she founded here has continued to expand its programs and is now a driving force for environmental education and research in southeastern New England. "K.G." believed the Center should foster an environmental understanding in both the future scientists of the world and anyone drawn by the natural beauty of the region.

As we witness the consequences of environmental ignorance and indifference throughout the world, the relevancy of Karen Lloyd's vision becomes increasingly clear.
